Mayborn School hosts ACEJMC Accreditation Team

The Frank W. and Sue Mayborn School of Journalism and Mayborn Graduate Institute will host a site visit by the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communications from Jan. 24-27. This follows a comprehensive self-study conducted by the Mayborn during the 2014-2015 fiscal year.

The Mayborn’s undergraduate program has been accredited since 1968; the graduate program is the only accredited professional master’s program in the four-state region of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and New Mexico.

Fewer than 30 percent of the more than 400 journalism and mass communication programs in the nation are accredited by ACEJMC, according to Susanne Shaw, ACEJMC’s executive director. As of 2015, 115 programs were accredited in the voluntary program.

The accreditation process involves all levels, including students, alumni, advisory board members, donors and other stakeholders. Accreditations are reviewed every six years and involve an on-site visit by an accreditation team.

“It’s an intensive process and we’re very well prepared,” said Mayborn dean Dorothy Bland. “We feel that our program has grown to become one of the best in the nation over the past several years.”

Jerry Ceppos, dean of the Manship School of Mass Communication at Louisiana State University, will serve as the ACEJMC site chair for the Mayborn. Other site team members include Dr. Helen Katz, senior vice president and research director at Starcom Mediavest Group in Chicago; Dr. Gracie Lawson-Borders, dean of the School of Communications at Howard University; Maria Russell, director of executive education and professor of communications management and public relations at the Newhouse School of Public Communications, Syracuse University; and Dr. Alan G. Stavitsky, dean of the Donald W. Reynolds School of Journalism and Center for Advanced Media Studies at the University of Nevada-Reno.

During their visit, the site team will visit with faculty, staff, students, alumni and others. The team’s draft report will be provided to UNT President Neal Smatresk and Provost Finley Graves on Jan. 27. The ACEJMC Accrediting Committee will then review the report and make a recommendation in the spring to ACEJMC about renewing the accreditation. A decision is expected in May 2016.
A message from the Dean

Albert Einstein once said, “Creativity is intelligence having fun.” As 2016 unfolds, I encourage our students, faculty and staff to celebrate our creativity, intelligence and fun as well as collaborate more with others.

I’m delighted to share that Amber Reece, a UNT broadcast/digital journalism student, has been selected for the News21 program at Arizona State University. She is one of 22 students from 16 universities across the nation selected for this prestigious 10-week fellowship. The topic for the program will be voter access and participation during this national election year. Fellows will be paid $7,500 each for the 10-week reporting program plus up to $2,500 in travel expenses. Thanks to The Dallas Morning News for sponsoring this student.

Our Fort Worth Star-Telegram paid internship program launches in January, thanks to Jim Witt, the editor. Graduate student Azia Branson, and senior print/digital student Christian Boschult will be “doing breaking news, social media posting and some light video work,” wrote Witt.

The Frank W. and Sue Mayborn School of Journalism will offer three classes at UNT’s “New College at Frisco” starting the week of Jan. 19. The classes are Media Performance, which will be taught by Michelle Redmond, PR for Nonprofits, which will be taught by Rebecca Poynter, and Strategic Social Media, which will be taught by another adjunct instructor.

Don McGuire, media executive in residence, is part of the think tank exploring other initiatives ranging from sports media camps to a potential master’s program in computer science for the Frisco campus, under the direction of Brenda Sims. Lecturer Juli James is the Mayborn’s representative for the multidisciplinary CoLab Task Force and that group is brainstorming initiatives around six key verbs: learn, create, innovate, curate research and gather. If you have ideas you would like to share, please contact donald.mcguire@unt.edu or juli.james@unt.edu.

Expanding our talent pool is another one of our 2016 goals, and we have several new full-time hires to help. They include Karen Blumenthal, our visiting Reynolds Business Journalism professor, Rebecca Poynter, a visiting lecturer in public relations, and Adam Reese, the new NT Daily director.

We look forward to hosting the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communication team Jan. 24-27, and hope to have more good news to share after the ACEJMC votes in May.

Since 2016 marks the 100th anniversary of the Pulitzer Prizes and the 100th anniversary year of student media at UNT, we will have celebrations to honor both. The Mayborn Literary Nonfiction Conference theme for 2016 is “The Pulitzers: A Century of Excellence: People, Politics and Public Affairs.” We are inviting Mayborn alumni who have been Pulitzer Prize winners and others back in the fall for an NT Daily reunion. Registration for the Mayborn Conference, which is July 22-24, opens soon at www.themayborn.com. If you would like to volunteer to help with these events, please email dorothy.bland@unt.edu.

As discussed in the last Mayborn Insider, the Mayborn is growing and more faculty offices have been shifted to Sycamore Hall this semester. Ultimately, this is a $3 million renovation project with major construction slated to begin in the fall 2016. The goal is to move most of the operations to Sycamore by September 2017. Progress is in the air and lots of positive energy to share.

Onward and upward,

Dorothy Bland
Dean and Graduate Institute Director
Interested in a Ph.D. program?

Interested in a Ph.D. program? Consider UNT’s Interdisciplinary Information Science (IIS) Ph.D. program, which is the largest Ph.D. program in the information science discipline in the United States. More than 50 faculty are associated with the program, with 16 of them in the Department of Library and Information Sciences.

The program is concerned with the generation of new knowledge and encompasses not only the learning of certain bits of fact or processes, but also synthesis, analysis, and imagination – the forming of questions, thinking about issues, and communicating new ideas.

Twelve hours of required introductory courses are delivered on the Denton campus; however, many classes are offered in an online format. The program requires 48 hours of coursework, which is possible to complete in 2.5 years of full-time study. The residency requirement is met by completing at least 18 credit hours in two to three consecutive long semesters. Once coursework is completed, the student takes the qualifying exam and presents a dissertation proposal. A minimum of 12 dissertation hours are completed before presentation of the final research report in a public defense.

The IIS Ph.D. program offers several concentrations, including health informatics, cyber security and consumer behavior/experience management. A concentration in journalism has been proposed for the 2016-2017 school year, with the following classes meeting program requirements:

JOUR 5310 Media Ethics
JOUR 5320 New Technologies of Mass Communication
JOUR 5200 Public Opinion and Propaganda
JOUR 5210 Race, Gender and the Media: A Methods Approach
JOUR 5330 Strategic Social Media
JOUR 5510 Internet and Interactive Communication Strategy
JOUR 5550 Integrated Communications

The ultimate goal of the journalism concentration is to provide interdisciplinary training, research and professional services in journalism. This concentration is intended to prepare highly trained academics who are capable of conducting research on the information aspects of journalism.

Admission criteria include an overall 3.4 GPA, master’s degree, GRE test scores, three letters of recommendation, personal statement, CV and scholarly writing sample.

Mayborn graduates enrolled in the IIS Ph.D. program include Miyoung Chong (MA), Jo Ann Livingston (MJ) and Jenny Mumah (MA).

News reporting students at the Mayborn School of Journalism took field trips to major network studios around the DFW area and hosted well-known reporters in the fall of 2015.

“We learn all the basics in the classroom,” said Mayborn broadcast news lecturer Michelle Redmond. “But it all comes together in a big way when our students have the chance to see how all the skills translate directly to investigating and reporting the news out in the real world.”

In October, Mayborn media performance classes hosted George Riba, who recently retired from more than 40 years reporting sports and news at WFAA-TV in Dallas. In November, students in the Mayborn’s BEA club had the chance to hear KTVT reporter Steve Pickett.

A group of Mayborn students also spent a full day visiting KXAS/Telemundo in Dallas, where they met with news producers, several news anchors and the vice president of news.
Faculty research & presentations

Dr. Meredith Clark gave a presentation on her work involving Black Lives Matter and Black Twitter during the first Research Brown Bag hosted by Mayborn’s Research Committee. Undergraduates, graduate students and faculty attended the lunch-time event Nov. 11.

The Research Brown Bags will be held periodically to encourage students to conduct research and to provide them with information about faculty projects. “I’m going to encourage you to start doing research today,” said Clark, who listed her research interests as the Black press, cyber culture, mediated images of Black life, newsroom practices and culture, digital media journalism pedagogy and Black feminist thought.

Clark discussed her path to obtaining her Ph.D., which focused on Black Twitter. She described research steps as starting with a question, reading related literature, rephrasing the questions, finding and reading more literature, deciding on methodology, conducting the research, writing, editing, writing “some more,” presenting the work, and publishing. Her dissertation has since led to multiple citations and placed her as an expert on the Black Twitter phenomenon.

She is working on more than a half-dozen studies, of which one is a collaborative project with two other researchers about the Black Lives Matter movement that is utilizing in-depth interviews, big data and textual/semiotic analysis.

Clark shared her thoughts on how students can get into research and said students learn best how to conduct research by doing it. “Data is all around you,” she said. “Think about the ways we are creating data. Ethnographers see data in our interactions with one another.”

Dr. Jim Mueller presented a paper titled “Stanley Before Livingstone: Henry Morton Stanley’s Coverage of Hancock’s War against the Plains Tribes in 1867” on November 7 at the Symposium on the 19th Century Press, the Civil War, and Free Expression.

In the paper, Mueller discussed how Henry Morton Stanley achieved international fame by finding missionary David Livingstone in Central Africa and contributing “Dr. Livingstone, I presume?” to the national lexicon.

The paper analyzes Stanley’s reporting of the campaign, placing it in the context of his career as an adventure journalist. Because the campaign was Stanley’s first extensive experience in journalism, study of his war reporting sheds light on his development into one of the most noted reporters of the age.

Mueller also gave a talk titled “A Master in the Art of Living: The Unknown Life of George Armstrong Custer” on Nov. 28 to the North Texas Mensa regional conference held in Grapevine. The talk was based on research from Mueller’s book Shooting Arrows and Slinging Mud.

Mayborn programs expand to new Frisco campus

The Mayborn School will offer three classes at UNT’s “New College at Frisco” starting the week of Jan. 19. The classes are Media Performance, PR for Nonprofits, and Strategic Social Media. For more information, see journalism.unt.edu.
Students such as Ashley Bowden and Maegan Bailey enjoy a variety of opportunities for internships with area media outlets including KXII-TV in Sherman, Texas.

Julie Buchanan, who joined the Mayborn on Dec. 8, 2008, is retiring Jan. 29 as the graduate academic advisor. Her retirement celebration is Jan. 29 at the Harvest House, 331 E. Hickory, at 5:30 p.m. in Denton.

“It has been a huge part of my life for many years,” said Buchanan. “Getting to know the students and seeing them grow through the program has been incredibly meaningful, and I’ll miss that very much.”

A search for her replacement is underway. We wish Buchanan and her family all the best. Feel free to share your good wishes on the Mayborn’s Facebook page.

Cora Davis, is now the Operations Coordinator for The Civil Rights Memorial Center in Montgomery, Alabama. The organization is part of the Southern Poverty Law Center.

Lourdes Vasquez is the new parent communications coordinator for Uplift Education in Dallas. She is managing the parent newsletter, social media and video projects.

Two Mayborn advertising alumni, Randy Romero and E. J. Stancil, are working together at Chicago-based Digitas, a leading digital advertising firm with clients worldwide.

“It’s pretty amazing to see two Mayborn advertising graduates working at the same agency,” said Dr. Sheri Broyles. “But it’s not altogether unexpected since we have so many people out working so many places – they have to bump into each other eventually.”

Do you have an alumni story or update to share? If so, please contact us at journalism@unt.edu.

Register now for the 12th annual Mayborn Literary Nonfiction Conference featuring nearly three-dozen speakers participating in high-energy, interactive and educational workshops to an audience of more than 400 reporters, editors, writers, publishers, agents and educators. This year’s event will be held July 22-24 at the DFW Lakes Hilton in Grapevine, Texas.

The theme for this year’s conference is Pulitzers: A Celebration of Excellence – People, Politics and Public Affairs.” The event will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the prestigious prize, and feature numerous prize winners in all areas of journalism. Featured speakers include Gilbert King and Sheryl WuDunn. For more information, visit themayborn.com.

Alexander Heffner, host of The Open Mind on PBS, will speak in the new Union building on February 11 at 7 p.m. The topic of his speech will be the Millennial Vote in 2016.
What happens to the community when three-fourths of a small indigenous Mayan town must migrate or emigrate for work? Last summer, students from the Mayborn School of Journalism immersed themselves in the small town of Tunkas in Mexico’s Yucatan peninsula to find out.

The award-winning Heart of Mexico summer study abroad program brings Mayborn students together with students from the Autonomous University of the State of Mexico to tell the extraordinary stories of ordinary people in narrative text, photos, and short video documentaries.

Last year’s project shared the story of contemporary Mayan migration through an intimate focus on personal stories covering a wide range of experiences - families divided, broken, bonded and reunited. As a whole, the project transcended stereotypes with a nuanced view of migration as it impacts one small community.
To review stories produced by Mayborn students, visit http://heartofmexicostories.com/

The project also launched a new Facebook page for its growing number of fans: https://www.facebook.com/heartofmexicostories/. Within only a few days, the page attracted more than 500 followers.

Recognizing excellence

UNT’s Heart of Mexico project has received numerous international awards, including the Andrew Heiskell Award for Innovation in International Education by the Institute of International Education (IEE).

Many Mayborn students have also received awards, including:

- Greta Díaz. Second Place. Inaugural Video Competition for the International Pan American Regional Conference on Migration. International Award Conferred by the Mexican Ministry of Foreign Affairs. November 12, 2015.

A multimedia program, “Heart of Mexico: Migrant Dreams,” was presented in December 2015 at the Bath House Cultural Center Theater in Dallas.

Mayborn associate professor Koji Fuse has developed the Mayborn in Japan study abroad program, which is slated to begin in the summer of 2016. Students will have the opportunity to study international communications and visit with major news bureaus and advertising and public relations firms during the five-week program under the direction of Fuse and assistant professor Meredith Clark.

One of the safest, most technologically advanced, yet most culturally intriguing countries in the world, Japan is an ideal destination where the ancient, the medieval, the modern and the postmodern mingle to produce a dynamic culture but maintain complex journalism and mass communication practices vastly different from those of the United States.

Mayborn in Japan slated for summer 2016

Congratulations to Rebecca Poynter, a UNT journalism alumna and PR consultant, who is moving from an adjunct instructor to visiting full-time lecturer in public relations effective January 2016. She has more than 25 years of experience as a public relations professional with corporate, digital, tech, start-up, university, legislative and nonprofit experience. She has worked with a variety of companies and organizations ranging from AT&T Wireless to the Federal Emergency Management Agency. She led the integrated and collaborative legislative campaign in support of the Military Spouses Residency Relief Act, which is now Federal law 111-97. Her work has been published in a variety of publications including The Dallas Morning News, Washington Post, Military Times and Inside Collin County Business. Among the classes she has taught at UNT are JOUR 3410 (Public Relations for Nonprofits) and JOUR 3420 (Public Relations Writing). She earned a master’s degree in journalism at UNT in 2011.

Neil Foote, principal lecturer, becomes president of the National Black Public Relations Society, Inc., effective January 2016. The organization has more than 500 members and represents “public relations administrators, media specialists, government relations directors and communication professionals,” according to the NBPRS website. “Our goal is to re-energize the organization, to create stronger ties with the industry and provide greater benefits to our members, including greater access to job opportunities and development,” said Foote. He will play a key role in organizing the NBPRS Convention in the fall 2016.
Jim Mueller is on faculty development leave for the spring semester 2016 and is working on a book project. He attended the American Journalism Historians Convention Oct. 7-9 in Oklahoma City. He serves as the Digital Review editor for American Journalism.

Welcome back to Adam Reese, who starts Jan. 4 as the NT Daily director. Reese is a UNT alum with a bachelor’s degree in hospitality management. While a UNT student, he worked as an NT Daily ad sales manager from 2003-2008. He lives in Denton and formerly owned Reese Marketing. He also was an assistant vice president for Point Bank and vice president of development for Campus Theatre in Denton. Reese has been involved with a variety of local nonprofit organizations ranging from the United Way of Denton County to the Denton Chamber of Commerce.

Best wishes to Jacqui Serie, who has been with NT Daily since 1998. The former NT Daily director is working part-time to help Reese transition. Serie is an artist who is completing her master’s degree in the College of Visual Art & Design. She plans to spend more time growing the family art business that she and her husband John Bramlitt own.

We wish the family all the best and thank Serie for all she has done for NT Daily and UNT’s Mayborn School of Journalism.

Karen Blumenthal, a former Wall Street Journal bureau chief and Dallas Morning News business editor, joined the Mayborn School as UNT’s Reynolds Visiting Journalism Professor in January. Blumenthal has published numerous books for young people with the belief that nonfiction brings context to a complicated world. She has written on social change – how it happens and why. In more than two decades with The Wall Street Journal, Blumenthal covered retailing, oil and gas, housing, mergers, and bankruptcies. She was the Dallas bureau chief for eight years, supervising a dozen reporters covering an eight-state territory. In that role, she coordinated and edited one of the Sept. 11, 2001 stories that won the 2002 Pulitzer Price for spot-news reporting. From 2008 to 2013, she wrote the paper’s Getting Going personal finance column.

Rick Weitzman has joined the Mayborn as an academic advisor II. He is a graduate of Temple University, where he double-majored in Media Theory and Spanish Linguistics. He has previously worked as an advisor at Lake Washington Institute of Technology. Rick has a passion for international travel and has studied abroad in both London and Tokyo, and has traveled through much of Europe and East Asia. He can often be found in Denton coffee-shops with his dog, Lil Joey.
“During the fall of 2015 multimedia students from the Mayborn visited the Jubilee Park neighborhood community center where they captured oral histories from senior citizens from the area – an amazing experience for all,” said associate professor Thorne Anderson, the program’s director. “Those interviews are now edited and have been presented to the center for their archives and for special screenings.”

Ninety-five students of the Mayborn School of Journalism received diplomas at commencement ceremonies in December. Congratulations to all our new graduates from everyone in the Mayborn community!

KTVT reporter Steve Pickett speaks to members of the Mayborn BEA club in November. The club began in 2015 under the direction of Mayborn lecturer Michelle Redmond.
Five photographers from Mayborn’s Hatch Visuals, the student managed photo agency, covered a three-day major event for St. John’s Priory USA. The Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of Saint John of Jerusalem is a serving Order of Chivalry under the British Crown, based in London, England. Their members support an eye hospital in Jerusalem. The Knighting and Investiture ceremony took place in Dallas and Terrell, Texas where Prince Richard, Duke of Gloucester, laid a ceremonial wreath honoring WWII RAF pilots who gave their lives while training to fly.

Congratulations to Alex Anderson, Laura Jarriel and Ashlea Ramirez. All three are seniors and have been selected by faculty as “Outstanding Undergraduate Students” in the Mayborn School of Journalism for the fall semester 2015.

Anderson is from Temple and was named the Outstanding Public Relations Student. “She has done two internships with the Dr. Phil organization and has helped run his social media with the production team,” said Samra Bufkins, a lecturer. “The work she did with Carter BloodCare was strategically sound and technically perfect,” added Bufkins, who described Anderson as the “consummate professional.”

Gwen Nisbett, an assistant professor, praised Anderson for “a keen intellect mixed with top-notch creativity – characteristics that will serve her well in her future career.”

Laura Jarriel is from Austin and was named the Outstanding News Student. She has been a leader in Hatch Visuals, our student-run photo agency, and produced amazing work as part of the Heart of Mexico project in 2015. Here’s a link to her blog: http://www.laurajarrielphotography.com/blog/

“Laura has always been an inspiration to other students by the cheerful way she works through every problem,” said Thorne Anderson, an assistant photojournalism professor. “She’s undefeatable.”

Ramirez is from Houston and the Outstanding Advertising Student. She has distinguished herself as a leader in SWOOP, our student-run advertising and public relations firm. She also serves as a Mayborn Ambassador this school year and served as account executive for the UNT Admissions Book in the fall 2015. She will be president of SWOOP in the spring semester 2016. “Ashlea is the most prominent leader we’ve ever had in advertising,” said Bill Ford, a lecturer and SWOOP adviser.

Ricco Ethics Award

The deadline for entries for the 2016 Nicholas and Anna Ricco Ethics Scholarship is January 31. Awards are given to winners in each of the 13 schools and colleges at UNT. For more information, visit journalism.unt.edu/2016-nicholas-and-anna-ricco-ethics-scholarship-competition-guidelines.
The NT Daily Newsroom got a makeover over the holiday break, thanks to the generosity of a donor.

“We really appreciate Ratcliff and Associates for donating $45,000 worth of furniture to benefit our students and the news-gathering process,” said Dorothy Bland, dean for the Frank W. and Sue Mayborn School of Journalism. “We are also investing High Education Assistance Funds to upgrade workstations. We also sincerely appreciate Darlene Callahan, Cheryl Benningfield, Kasey Price and all the work that the UNT Space Management and Planning Team put in as well as the UNT Facilities Team.”

Also, hats off to the NT Daily team for earning seventh place in the nation from the Associated Collegiate Press for a multimedia package. It’s great to see NT Daily news stories that have been picked up by many national media outlets including Fox, CBS, The Washington Post, The New York Times and others.
